DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-9 have been considered but are moot in view of the cancelled claims. Examiner acknowledges new claims by Applicant and presents additional prior art(s) for the new claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 10-30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Maeda (USPN 6,437,843).

With respect to claim 10, Maeda discloses a facsimile apparatus (internet facsimile apparatus 1, col. 3, lines 6-24) capable of performing facsimile communications through a computer network (col. 2, lines 57-66), said apparatus comprising:

a storage section (RAM 12, col. 3, lines 24-27);

an address acquisition section configured to acquire addresses of other parties of the facsimile communications during the facsimile communications (list of Fig. 6 showing other fax addresses to initiate transmission);

an address storage control section (see "INTERNET ADDRESS" of Fig. 6) configured to store all of the addresses acquired by the address acquisition section for a given time period in the storage section so as to maintain a communication history (see "DATE and TIME of ACQUISITION" of Fig. 6) and an address designation section configured to selectively designate an address of a desired one of the other parties from the addresses stored in the storage section and to set the designated address as a designated other party address (using one-touch number of Fig. 6 to designate a fax party).

With respect to claim 11, Maeda discloses a facsimile apparatus according to claim 10, further comprising:

a communication-capability acquisition section (RAM 12 of Maeda in Fig. 6) configured to acquire communication-capability information of the other parties during the facsimile communications;

a communication-capability storage control section ("Internet Fax Function" in Fig. 6) configured to store the communication-capability information acquired by the communication-capability acquisition section in the storage section in correspondence with the corresponding addresses acquired by the address acquisition section;

wherein when new communication-capability information corresponds to an address already stored in the storage section in correspondence with communication-capability information, and if the new communication-capability information is different from the already-stored communication-capability information, the address storage control section updates the already-stored communication capability information to coincide with the new communication-capability information

Maeda discloses a RAM 12 obtaining capability information of destination apparatuses by transmitting capability requests to destination apparatuses and receiving notification from destination apparatuses using a mail protocol (col. 6, lines 21-26), specifically SMTP (col. 6, line 23), also teaching converting a file according to the capability of the receiving apparatus (col. 6/lines 26-28) and to transmit the converted sending data as e-mail using SMTP (col. 6, lines 29-30). Examiner notes that the Table of Fig. 6 is updated and a date-stamp is associated with the update.

With respect to claim 12, Maeda discloses a facsimile apparatus according to claim 10, further comprising a communication-capability storage control section configured to store communication-capability information in the storage section in correspondence with the corresponding addresses of the other parties ("Internet FAX capability" stores capability of other parties, col. 6, lines 10-12), said communication-capability information being included in affirmation information transmitted from the other parties after completion of the facsimile communications (the information is received by the CPU 5 as a capability notification, col. 6, lines 24-26);

wherein when new communication-capability information corresponds to an address already stored in the storage section in correspondence with communication-capability information, and the new communication-capability information is different from the already-stored communication-capability information, the address storage control section updates the already-stored communication capability information to coincide with the new communication-capability information (Examiner notes that the Table of Fig. 6 is updated and a date-stamp is associated with the update. The capability information for any address is updated when the apparatus of Maeda polls the capabilities of network devices, col. 6, lines 21-26).

With respect to claim 13, Maeda discloses a facsimile apparatus according to claim 10, wherein the storage section comprises a recipient-address area (Fig. 3, Line 5) and an originator-address area (Fig. 3, Line 5); and wherein when the other party of one of the facsimile communications is a recipient of the facsimile communication, the address of the other party is stored in the recipient-address area (see Fig. 3), and when the other party of one of the facsimile communications is an originator of the facsimile communication, the address of the other party is stored in the originator-address area (see Fig. 3).

With respect to claim 14, Maeda discloses a facsimile apparatus according to claim 13, wherein the address designation section receives a designation of one of the recipient-address storage area and the originator-address storage area, displays a list of addresses stored in the designated one of the storage areas, receives a request to selectively designate the desired address from the addresses in the displayed list (list of Fig. 6 showing other fax parties to initiate transmission), and sets the designated address (using one-touch number of Fig. 6 to designate a fax party) from the list as the designated other party address.

With respect to claim 15, Maeda discloses facsimile apparatus according to claim 13, wherein the storage section further comprises an abbreviated-dialing registration area (see "ONE-TOUCH NUMBER" section of Fig. 6); and wherein the facsimile apparatus further comprises an address registration section which receives a designation of a desired address stored in one of the recipient-address storage area (see "INTERNET ADDRESS" of Fig. 6) and the originator-address storage area and registers the designated address in the abbreviated-dialing registration area (see registered address of "INTERNET ADDRESS" of Fig. 6).

With respect to claim 16, Maeda discloses facsimile apparatus according to claim 15, wherein the address registration section receives a designation of one of the recipient-address storage area and the originator-address storage area, displays a list of addresses stored in the designated one of the storage areas (list of Fig. 6 showing other fax parties to initiate transmission), receives a request to selectively designate the desired address from the addresses in the displayed list and registers the designated address from the list in the abbreviated-dialing registration area (using one-touch number of Fig. 6 to designate a fax party).
